Target audience

The primary audience is product marketing managers and startup founders at B2B SaaS companies with 10 to 200 employees. A secondary audience is revenue leaders who coordinate launches across product, sales, and marketing teams.

Customer problem

Launch information is often spread across briefs, calendars, spreadsheets, and old campaign documents. This creates inconsistent messaging, missed dates, and unsupported claims.

Value proposition

LaunchPilot AI turns approved launch information into a coordinated, ready-to-edit campaign suite while preserving source attribution and human control.

Approved messaging

- Plan once and launch consistently across every channel.
- Turn approved product evidence into coordinated campaign content.
- Keep human reviewers in control of risky or incomplete claims.

Tone guidance

Use a clear, confident, practical, and evidence-led tone. Avoid hype, guarantees, competitor comparisons, and claims such as best, revolutionary, or risk-free.

Required factual boundaries

- Do not claim that LaunchPilot AI publishes content automatically.
- Do not claim support for private Google Drive or Notion accounts.
- Do not promise revenue growth or guaranteed campaign performance.
- If a fact is not present in this brief, identify it as missing rather than inventing it.

Past approved campaign line

Your launch facts are already written down. LaunchPilot AI helps your team turn them into one consistent campaign.
